

Japanese Ground Self-Defense Forces train alongside U.S. Forces at NTC for first time

February 12, 2014

By Staff Sgt. Christopher McCullough

A Type 74 Main Battle Tank of the Japan Ground Self-Defense Force rolls through the motor pool at the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif., Jan. 15, 2014. The JGSDF were at NTC for the first time last month to conduct joint training exercises with 3-2nd Stryker Brigade Combat Team, 7th Infantry Division, from Joint Base Lewis-McChord, Wash. Training opportunities such as this are good for both countries as it encourages mutual respect and promotes enduring relationships for both U.S. and Japanese soldiers. (Photo by Staff Sgt. Chris McCullough)

JOINT BASE LEWIS-MCCHORD, Wash. - Soldiers from 3rd Stryker Brigade Combat Team, 7th Infantry Division, conducted bilateral training with Japanese soldiers with the Japan Ground Self-Defense Force's 1st Company, 1st Mechanized Battalion, from Fukuoka, Fukuoka Prefecture, Japan, last month.

(出典) 米陸軍公式ホームページ ニュース記事 2014年2月12日付

2015年7月30日 参議院我が国及び国際社会の平和安全法制に関する特別委員会

日本共産党 井上哲士 提出資料